"Originally called the adidas crazy explosive low, the Crazy 97 EQT is most notably known for being the sneaker a rookie Kobe Bryant wore in the 1997 Slam Dunk contest in Cleveland. The Crazy 97 EQT uses Feet You Wear technology, which is designed to mimic your foot anatomically with curves and shape of the foot, using a wide, low to the ground base and rounded off edges to prevent ankles from turning over.

The sneaker adidas stan smith price us is inspired by Stan's beanie, with a tonal look in blue making up the upper and overlays, and a red suede rand that surrounds the sneaker. The tongue tag features co-branding of South Park and adidas, and features Stan Marsh's face on the blue suede tongue. The heeltab features the Trefoil with "Stan Marsh" debossed underneath and a white midsole and outsole finish off the sneaker.

The "Beluga Reflective" colorway is very similar to the Beluga colorway but with an added reflective element on the upper and laces. The rest of the adidas yeezy boost 350 price is similar to the OG, with a grey patterned Primeknit upper and bright orange stripe with "SPLY-350" adorned on the lateral side. Full-length BOOST is utilized for cushioning, with it enclosed in a translucent grey rubber on the midsole and outsole.

Just like the original, the adidas shoes for men running features a lucky two-toned green composition, with the darker shade beige predominant in the upper suede overlay and the SPRINTFRAME construction. The lighter green is seen on the tongue, eyelets, and heel stripes, while a solid white finishes the look on the outsole and toe-box."
